

CANADIAN AIRMEN WANT LINDBERGH TO CHANGE ROUTE

Flier, However, Refuses to Accept Suggested Air
Lanes

NO SERIOUS CLEAVAGE

Route Decided Upon Has Been Flown But Once Successfully

OTTAWA, July 31.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and officers of the Royal Canadian Air Forces today were at loggerheads over the route which the Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh should take on their flight across Northern Canada en route to Japan.

Colonel Lindbergh has refused to accept the suggestion of the Canadians that the northern route selected by the American flier might be especially dangerous at this time of year, it was understood. He has insisted on taking the uncharted route to the north instead of the more southerly way along the MacKenzie River, which the Canadian flyers have urged him to follow. The southern route was followed by Post and Gatty in their record dash around the world.

Colonel Hanford MacNider, United States Minister to Canada, today belittled the difference of opinion between Lindbergh and the Canadians and said there was no serious cleavage on the question of routes but that "details of the route in the northern direction were discussed at some length by Lindbergh and Canadian flyers."

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh arrived here yesterday from North Haven, Me., where they said farewell to their son, Charles, Jr., after a flight of three and one-half hours. They were welcomed here by officials and aviators and went immediately to the home of Colonel MacNider. They planned to remain here until Saturday, hopping then for Moose Factory on James Bay, the next stop of their 7,000 mile trip to the Orient. Moose Factory is 461 miles from Ottawa.

Canadian flyers met Lindbergh last night and discussed his trip in the far north and the best route to follow from Baker Lake to Aklavik on the MacKenzie River, which will be his last landing place in Canada.

Captain Mandesley of the Canadian Air Force said he strongly opposed Lindbergh going from Baker Lake or Beverly Lake further west to Bathurst Inlet, thence to Coronation Gulf and from there to Aklavik.

"I am strongly opposed to this route," the captain said. "It has been flown but once successfully and then there were two machines. For a single plane to attempt this flight is running an unjustifiable risk."

Mandesley said Lindbergh should take the southern route from Baker Lake to the junction of the Thelon and Handbury rivers, following the Thelon to the junction and thence by compass go direct to Fort Reliance on Great Slave Lake, skirt that water to the MacKenzie River and follow it to Aklavik.

NEWS OF THE WORLD TODAY

MOSCOW, July 31.—(INS)—Like a great eagle the Bellanca round-the-world plane of Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn whirled down to the October Airdrome here at 11:52
a. m. (5:52 a. m., Eastern Daylight Time.)

The flyers came to a pause in the gray, medieval capital of the Soviet after a night flight from Berlin at high speed, for the young men were out to cut down the time of Post and Gatty in their speedy globe-circling tour.

When they left Berlin they had reduced the handicap put on them to fourteen hours.

If they can cut out the delays which held up Post and Gatty in Russia, Herndon and Pangborn still have a chance to reduce the time of the Winnie Mae, although she was a faster plane than the Miss Vedol.

The flyers were expected to spend only a short time in Moscow before proceeding across the dreary Siberian steppes toward the Pacific and Alaska.

VISIT GAME PRESERVE

DOYLESTOWN, July 31.—Fruit growers from Bucks County, totalling about 250, participated in the two-day sessions of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Fruit Growers Association at the Trexler Orchards, near Allentown, this week.

Gathered from all sections of the state there were approximately 2,000 fruit growers who enjoyed the meetings of the association, sponsored by the Lehigh County Horticultural Society.

Addresses and a demonstration of modern machinery for care and cultivation of orchards were included.
The field day events, occurring on Wednesday, attracted many from Bucks.

A tour of inspection through the game preserve, orchards and poultry farms, which contains about 6,000 birds, was likewise on the program.

The fruit growers were addressed by C. R. Swinson, of the United States Department of Agriculture, who spoke of the costs of producing fruit in Pennsylvania and the Shenandoah Valley fruit belt. The cost figures which he quoted were the result of a three-year survey of the bureau of economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Following the address the fruit growers were given the opportunity of seeing various types of orchard machinery in operation. These included sprayers, tractors, cultivators, dusters and graders.

The visitors inspected the large roadside market and the packing plant at the Trexler orchards. This plant has a modern refrigerating system and has a capacity of about 40,000 bushels.

old custom of naming river barges, used to haul steel and other indus-has been revived here.

A large refining company, which recently ordered a fleet of ten barges for transportation of petroleum products, instructed the barge-building firm to paint names instead of numbers on the barges. The names were those of counties in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, bordering the Allegh-

The barges have been registered with the U. S. Customs with Port Arthur, Tex., as their home port.

Philadelphia, July 31.—Suspects operating in the guise of "prohibition agents," and "shaking down" proprietors of res-men, both former convicts, were arrested early today at the place of one of their alleged stick-ups. The two suspects said they "raided" the Hillside Inn at Trevose last Tuesday evening, and after finding a small quantity of alleged liquor the make-believe "prohibition agents" held a conference with the proprietor, I. Kamenski. According to the latter's story to the police, he gave the two men $50 to "forget" the "raid" and promised to pay them an additional $150 last night at the Northeast Pool, where they were to meet him. Kamenski, accompanied by State Police and city detectives, drove to the pool last night but en route the police saw the automobile of the two suspects, stopped them and placed them under arrest.

REPORT BANDITS RIFLED POCKETS OF ABOUT $2,000

Tony Mace Furnishes Information to Bristol
Police

HAVE NO CLEWS AS YET

Five Men, It is Stated, Took Money from Group of Fifteen

A hold-up with the resultant loss of approximately $2,000 was reported to Bristol police early this morning.

Five bandits are said to have participated in the robbery which occurred at a Lincoln avenue store, operated by Tony Mace, between two and three o'clock. Those reporting losses are a group of Bristol residents, numbering about 15 men.

According to the police those robbed stated they were playing a game of cards when the door opened and in rushed five men, unmasked.
The five who were unknown to their victims, at the point of pistols, rifled the pockets of those in the room.

Although the exact amount taken has not been determined, it is estimated at nearly $2,000.

When the bandits entered the store one called out "Put up your hands—all of you." They then proceeded to search for money and other valuables.
One of the five guarded the door to the street while the things of value were being taken.

Those robbed state that no motor could be heard running in the automobile standing at the front of the place. As far as could be learned no man was left at the wheel.

After making a hurried examination of the men's clothing and emptying all pockets, the quintet is said to have hurried from the place, leaped into the waiting automobile, and sped away.

Bristol police are working on the case, what details possible having been furnished by Mace. The officers state they have no clues to work on, description of the bandits which have been furnished, being but meagre.

The entire affair occurred in a remarkably short space of time, and with the entrance of the five and the quick commands which followed, those robbed offered no resistance.

EDISON ON WORDS

Thomas A. Edison says he cannot get cooperation from certain types of scientists because they use too many eight-dollar words. That is an interesting protest from a man who has demonstrated that he knows something about science himself.

At 84 years of age, Mr. Edison gives expression to the spirit of our age with admirable directness. Throughout all the history of the world, with the exception of the last century, learning delighted in obscuring itself in the mysteries of big words. Evidently the tradition is hard to throw off.

But with increasing effectiveness in our times, scientific thought and investigation seek to be good for the every-day uses of the many. Mr. Edison wants to find more plants to produce rubber and to adapt them to cultivation in our country. He wants this, not merely to be able to write a book about it, but to make it possible for more people to afford good rubbers and raincoats and automobile tires.

This probably will be one of the reasons why millions of people will revere the memory of Thomas A. Edison long after the names of many professors facile in the use of "eight-dollar words" have been forgotten.

ABOLISHING DEGREES

Criticism of the American scholastic system is easy, although the remedy is hard to find. Colleges and universities are functioning today probably as efficiently as ever, the difference between present and past being in the public's idea of what should be expected of them. It must be remembered that the United States only recently cast aside its swaddling clothes and that in an infant country higher education, or the need for higher education, is not a pressing matter. Now, however, conditions are different, and educators see that their structure is not perfect and are casting about for a remedy.

This is a healthy sign. The more thought expended upon the subject, the sooner the new university will arise. Blind copying of European institutions and methods will not suffice, for American problems, ideals, aims and ideas have little in common with those of foreign countries.

The stage is set for reform, and the day is not far distant when the American college will undergo its metamorphosis. Already it is demanded of college students that they do more original research, independent thinking and unsupervised study. Several institutions are contemplating abolition of the old system of grades and credits, that the student may work for intellectual attainment rather than for class promotion, credits and degrees. For the old system would be substituted a comprehensive final examination that would bring out the student's accumulated knowledge and attitude on intellectual matters.

College training is beneficial to the least studious and the most poorly equipped mentally, but the fact that no superior mentality is required to complete a college course would indicate that their institutional contribution to education is limited.

The weather forecasters say that it is impossible to tell just where local thunderstorms will occur. They are akin to an explosion. Recently Washington was rocked by thunderstorms on three successive days but virtually no rain fell in Baltimore 40 miles away.

There are places in North and South Carolina where it would be just as well to have no forecasts at all of thunderstorms in the summer," said a weather bureau forecaster. "You just can't tell when or where they will occur."

Nevertheless the weather bureau is proud of its record. The farm superintendent of the Soldiers' Home near Washington has relied upon the weather bureau for the past four years in the harvesting of alfalfa. He wants to be assured that it will not rain for a couple of days when he cuts it, and in four years he has not lost any of the product.

The weather bureau's chief record for accuracy, the forecasters explain, is made in predicting wide-spread movements. When a cold wave is discovered in the northwest, they usually can chart its course eastward. The same is true of storms and of hurricanes which sweep out of the Caribbean sea.

Weather forecasting, these earnest employees of Uncle Sam will tell you, originated primarily to protect life at sea. The forecasts were intended to cover vast movements of the air over hundreds or thousands of square miles.

But the service has expanded until there are local forecasts, and even more precise forecasts for the benefit of the aviators who dart about over the country each day.

The temperature may drop 15 to 20 degrees after a thunderstorm, but the weather forecasters object to anyone saying this breaks a heat wave. Their explanation is that as the rain falls in a thunderstorm much of it is evaporated. This takes much heat out of the air. Also the rain is cold when it begins to fall and this cools the air. Since thunderstorms usually occur in the late afternoon, the sun does not have a chance to warm up the atmosphere before night. But if a heat wave is on, it will be back with the sun next day, they explain.

The weather forecasters say that it is impossible to tell just where local thunderstorms will occur. They are akin to an explosion. Recently Washington was rocked by thunderstorms on three successive days but virtually no rain fell in Baltimore 40 miles away.

There are places in North and South Carolina where it would be just as well to have no forecasts at all of thunderstorms in the summer," said a weather bureau forecaster. "You just can't tell when or where they will occur."

Nevertheless the weather bureau is proud of its record. The farm superintendent of the Soldiers' Home near Washington has relied upon the weather bureau for the past four years in the harvesting of alfalfa. He wants to be assured that it will not rain for a couple of days when he cuts it, and in four years he has not lost any of the product.

The weather bureau's chief record for accuracy, the forecasters explain, is made in predicting wide-spread movements. When a cold wave is discovered in the northwest, they usually can chart its course eastward. The same is true of storms and of hurricanes which sweep out of the Caribbean sea.

LENGTHY TRIP TAKEN BY FOUR FROM BUCKS

W. T. Briggs, of Langhorne, Member of Party Touring ing the West

TO RETURN AUGUST 20

A lengthy and interesting vacation trip to the Far West is being participated in by four from Bucks County. The quartet includes: William T. Briggs, of Langhorne; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Beidler, of Quakertown; Leonard LeDuc, of Allentown.

The tour party, with men and women from nearly forty counties of Pennsylvania and several adjoining States, will cover about 10,000 miles in 21 States, two provinces of Canada and one state of Mexico before the return on August 20th.

The journey is outlined as the Pennsylvania Farmer three-nation tour.

They will travel the whole distance by their own special train, with numerous side trips by automobile, motor coaches and steamship. The tour special has its own club car, parlor, observation car and dining car.

Niagara Falls, where the Eastern Pennsylvania and the Pittsburgh sections of the tour special are united, is the first stop. In Chicago the party will tour the city, visit the stock yards, have luncheon as guests of Armour & Company, and visit the studios of the National Broadcasting Company.

Crossing North Dakota there will be a motor tour to Bismarck. Sioux Indians will welcome the party in tribal fashion at Mandan. At Medora, near where President Roosevelt ranches as a young man, cowboys of the Bad Lands region will stage a thrilling rodeo for the tour members. Three days will be devoted to exploring Yellowstone National Park, with one night near Old Faithful Geyser and another at the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone. On the final day the group will make the spectacular drive to Cody, Wyoming, through the Buffalo Bill country and the scenes of "The Virginian."

Irrigated orchards in the Yakima Valley, Washington, will be visited, and stops made at Seattle and Victoria, the capital of British Columbia on Vancouver Island. The latter city will be reached by steamer from Seattle.

Living glaciers near Paradise Valley, Mr. Rainier, will furnish new sights, and at Longview, Washington, the party will go through one of the largest lumber mills in the world. Leaving Portland, Oregon, an auto trip along the beautiful and famed Columbia River highway will be made.

Many stops are to be made in California. At Petaluma the travelers will visit the chicken farms and egg packing houses. San Francisco and Marinosa Grove are on the itinerary. At the latter there are some of the largest trees on earth. The Yosemite Valley, Los Angeles, San Diego, will be of interest to all, and the trip includes jaunts into Old Mexico to Agua Caliente and Tia Juana.

On the homeward trip stops are to be made at the Grand Canyon, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Pike's Peak.

ANDALUSIA

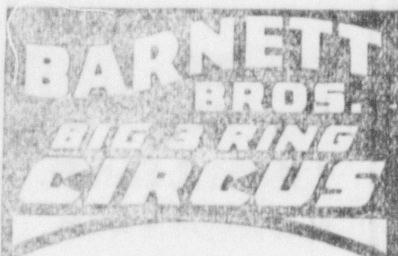

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vandergrift entertained on Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Donaldson, of Frankford; Mr. and Mrs. William Heinemore and children, Joseph Thompson and John Barry, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Watson motorized above Easton on Sunday and visited relatives.

GOLFER BURKE'S STYLE ANALYZED BY WRITER

By James L. Kilgallen
(U. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, July 31.—Billy Burke, of the poker face and long cigars, the new National Open Golf Champion, is anything but a stylist. He does not play with the smooth, rhythmical manner of Bobby Jones whose crown he now wears but just the same he is a tremendously effective and interesting golfer.

Burke defies precedent in several ways. For one thing he stands closer to the ball than most of the great pros, such as Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Whiffy Cox and Leo Diegel. He hunches over his ball. If anything he is a pusher rather than a lunker or a swinger. He gives the impression of steering his shots.

When Burke takes his stance his club head is absolutely in line with the ball. Most of the stars have the face of the club opened a trifle. Burke also has the toe of his club lifted a bit, giving the impression that he heels his club—even the putter. In most of his well-lofted iron shots he takes almost no divot. His iron or brassie just about brushes the grass.

Another characteristic of Burke's playing is his boldness on the green. When he plays a long putt he invariably reaches the cup or goes beyond. He is anything but a "safe" player. He shoots for the hole, evidently believing in the maxim: "Never up, never down."

Burke is almost six feet tall and weighs about 173 pounds. He is dark haired, dark complexioned and has a slight stoop. He is the personification of confidence and tenacity. Nothing bothers him. He takes the "breaks," one way or the other with the utmost nonchalance. He does not fret and fume for several holes after a flubbed shot.

Watching him play George Von Elm in that historic double play-off at Inverness, I noticed that when Burke was on the green he relaxed. He did not watch Von Elm any too closely while the latter was putting. On the contrary, Burke seldom saw Von Elm make his putts. Usually, he was looking in another direction—either by while Von Elm was concentrating on the task of getting the ball in or down. In other words Burke does not punish himself unnecessarily by over-taxing his mind during a gruelling competitive match. Burke is one of the few outstanding golfers who "stiff-arm" his putts. He does not watch the ball in putting, with his left arm virtually rigid. He gives the impression of pushing his putts, just as he seems to be shoving his iron shots and drives. However, he is seldom off line and his game within 150 yards of the green is something at which to marvel. Few players can chip dead to the pin with as much regularity as Burke. That is why he is so often down in one putt.

His putting and handling of short shots in his thrilling match with Von Elm was uncanny at times. Four times on the last round of the second play-off he laid chip shots within less than six inches from the cup.

The break in the epic Burke-Von Elm match came at the short thirteenth hole on the final round. Burke was trapped and needed 4. Von Elm has a fairly short putt for a 2 but missed. The finishing blow fell on the sixteenth. There Von Elm took three putts from twelve feet. Burke's short game, meanwhile, was as consistent as ever and when Von Elm began to waver on the greens he was done.

Strangely enough, Burke lost no weight during the long and bitterly-fought contest. He started in weighing about 173 and held that poundage throughout, despite the heat and the fact he had played steadily the previous week during the Ryder Cup matches at Columbus. Von Elm, on the other hand, dropped fourteen pounds in the national open. When he holed out his final putt his weight was down to 139 and he knew he had been through a contest.
